

Hamjambo!

Peter and Olivia Dorfman will visit with our kids for Religious Exploration on Sunday, October 8th. They will show and share about their social justice trip to Kenya with International Outreach Task Force.

El Dia de los Muertos, Sunday, October 29th

This Sunday, all of our children will be staying in the service for a longer period as we celebrate El Dia de los Muertos as a community of all ages. This is a time we set aside in our congregation to remember the people and animals we have loved who have died. In preparation for the service, we encourage you to talk with your children about loved ones they have known who have died and find a photo or memento to bring to the service. If your child has not experienced the death of a loved one, consider taking time this week to tell them a story about someone you have loved who has died--what do you remember about a dear friend or relative that would help your child know something about that person? Share a photo or just a story and tell your child that you will be remembering that person this Sunday at our service.

How to Talk to Young Children about Race and Racism Sundays, October 29th and November 5th from 1-3pm in Fellowship Hall. This workshop is for adults who want to learn how to talk to young children (infant through Kindergarten) about race and racism. Everyone is welcome. Two-day workshop led by IU professor Nya

McCarthy-Brown. Attendance at BOTH sessions is expected. Reserve your space in the workshop and childcare if needed at this link: <https://goo.gl/forms/KQoHVTQYyJvQHipG3>

Age of Reason Ceremony, Sunday November 5th

Each year we share a ritual together that acknowledges the more independent learning that children begin at around age 6. Parents of first graders, this is an opportunity to share in this special ritual with your child during our Time For All Ages on November 5th. Mark your calendars now! If you do not receive an informational letter about this opportunity by Friday, October 20th, please contact Kitty McIntosh rea@uubloomington.org so that we can get your child registered and invited to the party!
